Benefits of Telecommuting for the Future of Work

No longer is remote work just for parents, it's a complete design in how we approach the way we work. The number of telecommuting workers has increased 115% in the last decade, according to a new report from Global Workplace Analytics and FlexJobs. Other research shows a direct correlation between increases in productivity and remote workers when organizations make a shift towards a more remote workforce. Join us for lunch and a discussion amongst benefits professionals led by Rebekah McGuire Dye, J.D. At this event, you will learn about the evolution of telecommuting and the many benefits it provides to both employers and employees.

Background on our speaker, Rebekah McGuire Dye, J.D.

Rebekah McGuire Dye is the Vice President of Legal Operations and Commercial Subrogation Operations at Equian, LLC. She began her subrogation career over 20 years ago with Healthcare Recoveries, Inc. and has stayed within the now Equian family of companies for over two decades. Ms. Dye graduated from the Brandeis School of Law at the University of Louisville in 2000. The last 17 years have been spent as an attorney, most of said years as a managing attorney within Equian, cumulating in her current role. She bears the responsibility for oversight of all catastrophic health and disability files for more than 150 of Equian's healthcare clients. She also manages the legal vendor management group at Equian and the Mass Tort program. Under Ms. Dye's umbrella are over ten attorneys and one hundred other subrogation professionals. She manages her team from the Louisville, KY office while partnering with and supervising other team members across the country. Her oversight also includes collaboration with all local counsels employed by Equian to resolve matters in active litigation naming Equian clients. She is an active member of both NASP and IDS. Ms. Dye can frequently be found speaking at National Association of Subrogation Professional events. Her favorite stewardship activity is participating as an elected member of the Nelson County Kentucky Board of Education. Sharing her knowledge of subrogation and cost containment legalities spark immense joy for Ms. Dye.

We hope you'll join us!
