SPEAKERKathleen Schulz, MS, CHES

Kathleen brings more than 20 years of experience in designing and implementing wellness, fitness, occupational health, EAP, benefits, and work/life programs. As the Global Innovation Leader for Organizational Wellbeing, Kathleen works with Gallagher teams and clients to design holistic strategies to address the total employee value proposition – including all the dimensions of wellbeing, employee engagement, productivity and resiliency.

Prior to joining Gallagher Benefit Services, Kathleen spent nineteen year's leading award winning occupational health and wellness programs at Campbell Soup Company and four years leading the health and wellness programs for NYNEX company in New York. Her experience lies in designing integrated approaches to organizational wellbeing by building relationships and collaborating with key internal stakeholders to understand the organization's mission, then developing strategies that enable the mission and support high performance.

Kathleen received her MS in Organizational Development with a minor in Health Administration, as well as a Post Graduate Diploma in Occupational Health, from St. Joseph's University in Philadelphia, PA. She also holds a BS in Cardiovascular Health from Northeastern University in Boston, MA and is a Certified Health Education Specialist (CHES). In 2018 Kathleen was named a Top 25 National Wellbeing Leader by the Corporate Health & Wellness Association and Corporate Wellness Magazine.
